

Function Machines

Function machines are used to apply operations in a given order to a value known as the input. The final value produced is known as the output.

Function machines can be used to solve number problems, solve equations and rearrange formulae.

 Example

